Frequently asked questions

What goes up but never comes down?

Your age. It rises by one every birthday and can never go back down, which is why this riddle turns up on so many birthday cards. Rain, balloons and prices are popular joke answers, but your age is the accepted one.

How many birthdays does the average man have?

Just one. Everyone has only one birthday, the day they were born. Every year after that is a celebration of it. That is why this classic riddle catches people off guard: most of us instinctively count the parties, not the actual birth.

What is a good riddle for adults?

A good riddle for adults has a fair setup and a twist answer that makes people groan. Try "I can be blown out but not knocked down. What am I? A candle." It is quick, clean and works for any birthday.

What comes once a year?

The usual answer is a birthday, though an anniversary or a holiday also fits. The setup is famous because of a letter riddle: "What comes once in a minute, twice in a moment, but never in a thousand years?" The answer there is the letter m.

How do you make a birthday riddle?

Start with an answer, list a few unexpected features, then describe them as if they belonged to something else. Read it to a friend. If it is too easy, add misdirection. If it is too hard, add one clear clue.

What is the most famous birthday riddle?

"What goes up but never comes down?" with the answer "your age" is the most famous birthday riddle. It is searched thousands of times every month and works for any age, which makes it a perfect card or toast opener.
