Frequently asked questions

Why do bees buzz?

Bees buzz because their wings beat very fast, around 230 times per second for a honey bee. The rapid wing movement and the vibration of their flight muscles create the buzzing sound. Bumblebees can also buzz without flying to shake pollen loose from flowers.

What do bees say?

In jokes, bees say "buzz" or "hive a nice day." In real life, bees communicate with dances and scents. The waggle dance tells other bees which direction and how far to fly for food, and pheromones signal alarm, attraction and colony health.

How do bees say happy birthday?

In pun form, bees say "happy bee day" or "have a hapbee birthday." These are the most popular bee happy birthday phrases on cards and cakes. Add a honey or queen bee line to make it extra sweet.

Why are bee puns so popular for birthdays?

Bee puns are popular for birthdays because "bee" sounds like "be," one of the most common words in English. That makes it easy to build wishes like "bee happy" and "bee-st birthday ever." Bees also suggest sweetness, honey and sunshine, which suit a happy celebration.

What is a bee birthday?

A bee birthday is a party themed around bees, with yellow and black decorations, honey treats, flower crowns and bee puns. It is popular for first birthdays (sometimes called a "sweet one" party) and for anyone whose nickname is Queen B.
