HOME NOTES MAGAZINE

159 Cat Christmas Puns for Trees and Cards (2026)

159 original puns, ready to copy

A cat Christmas pun here is about a box, a blink, a small ornament or a cat who has declined the hat. The tree can sparkle in the background. The joke does not cheer on a climb or a chew.

Quick summary

Cat Christmas puns here cover a present from the cat, small ornaments, hat-free portraits and a cat who is simply asleep. Tree jokes do not encourage climbing or chewing. The page holds 159 original lines and keeps dog Christmas jokes on their own page.

- 159 original cat Christmas puns for cards, ornaments and quiet photos.
- Tree jokes keep the cat on the chair, the rug or the basket.
- Hat-free and sleeping captions stay honest about the photo.
- Shelter thank-you lines name the gift before the pun.

Read the full guide with search, filters and FAQs: https://homespunsecret.com/cat-christmas-puns
Last updated 2026-11-08. Free for personal and classroom use. Please link back if you share.

Contents

1. A Christmas Pun for a Present From the Cat (20)
2. Tree Jokes That Do Not Encourage Climbing (20)
3. Cat Christmas Puns for a Small Ornament (18)
4. Captions for a Cat Who Refuses the Hat (20)
5. Greetings That Do Not Copy Song Lyrics (18)
6. Clean Cat Christmas Jokes a Child Can Read (22)
7. Shelter Holiday Thank-You Lines (20)
8. Captions for a Cat Who Is Simply Asleep (21)

A Christmas Pun for a Present From the Cat

The cat's gift is attention, a box or one perfect hair on a good sweater. The wrapped object is optional. Year-round cat jokes, outside December, live with the everyday cat puns and knock-knock lines.

1. The cat's present is the box. The thing you wrapped is now a footnote.
2. From the cat: one perfect hair on the sweater you are wearing out. You are welcome.
3. The gift is a slow blink from the back of the couch.
4. I got you a toy mouse. I will be the one using it.
5. The present is permission to sit nearby, renewable by the hour.
6. Wrapped by me: a small leaf from the mat, delivered with ceremony.
7. The card from the cat is a paw on your notebook.
8. I contributed by sitting on the paper until it stopped being noisy.
9. Your gift is the empty carton, upgraded by occupancy.
10. I signed the tag by walking across the damp ink. Abstract, and sincere.
11. The family cat gives presence, which is almost the same word as present.
12. A bell from the tray was inspected and declined. The real gift is the lap.
13. I wrapped nothing and still expect credit. This is the tradition.
14. The bow is mine now. The gift may proceed without it.
15. From the cat: I kept watch so you could wrap. That was my shift.
16. The best present I offer is moving my tail off your book.
17. Take the blink. It is small, and it is the whole greeting.
18. I placed a toy in your shoe. Finding it is part of the unwrapping.
19. The tag reads from the windowsill, which is my full address.
20. You may have the paper. I will have the quiet center of the room.

Tree Jokes That Do Not Encourage Climbing

The photo is an ordinary cat on a pavement, hat-free and nowhere near a trunk. The jokes agree: the tree is scenery, and the chair is the venue. They do not cheer on climbing or chewing.

21. The tree is a backdrop. The chair is the venue.
22. We admire the lights from the rug, which is the stated preference in this joke.
23. A climbing joke would cheer the wrong hobby. This one cheers the sofa.
24. The branches can sparkle without a passenger.
25. The tree is tall. The cat is horizontal. Both are correct.
26. Chewing a needle is not a punchline here. Choosing the basket is.
27. If the joke invites a scramble up the trunk, it needs a rewrite.
28. The cat watched the lights blink and blinked back, from the floor.
29. Ornaments stay on the tree in this sentence. The cat stays on the ottoman.
30. A good tree joke ends with the cat still bored and safe.
31. We kept the story beside the lowest branch, not inside it.
32. The star is high. The cat's ambition, in this caption, is nap-shaped.

33. Say beside the tree, not into the tree.
34. The joke can love the season and still love the cat on the ground.
35. Sparkle stays on the branch. The invitation list does not include a climb.
36. The cat's review of the tree: pretty, tall, and none of my business.
37. Write the laugh, then check that a child would not hear it as a dare.
38. The basket by the trunk is the punchline, and it is also the plan.
39. Lights are for looking. Laps are for landing.
40. The tree stands. The cat loafs. The caption agrees with the cat.

Cat Christmas Puns for a Small Ornament

Small means a bauble, a tiny bell or a painted fish that is admired, not chased. The line should say look, not go on.

41. A small ornament and a smaller caption: mouse-shaped, admired, not a toy.
42. The bauble reflects a face that did not ask to be festive.
43. Tiny bell, quiet cat, short line.
44. A little shine, a lot of side-eye.
45. Hang it where the story is look, not bat.
46. A photo ornament of the cat, which the cat has declined to acknowledge.
47. Small enough for a caption, round enough to be a moon.
48. The little wooden bird stays on the string. The joke stays on the page.
49. We chose a soft cloth shape for the lowest hook and still wrote the joke about looking.
50. Tiny and shiny is the whole description a child needs.
51. The ornament does not need a chase scene.
52. A miniature stocking on the branch, a full-size cat on the chair.
53. The small gold ball is a period at the end of the branch's sentence.
54. One small ornament, one large opinion.
55. If it dangles, the joke should not say go on.
56. The ornament is a painted fish. The real cat is unimpressed, and safe.
57. Write little on purpose. Little keeps the scene gentle.
58. The tiny bell rings only when a person bumps the branch, and the cat pretends not to care.

Captions for a Cat Who Refuses the Hat

This close-up is an ordinary fluffy cat with no hat in the frame. The captions stay hat-free, because that is what the picture shows.

59. The hat is on the chair. The cat is on the principle of the thing.
60. No costume in this photo, and no complaint from the cat about that.
61. Festive is a blanket and a blink. The hat can have the day off.
62. The cat refused the hat and accepted the cushion. Fair contract.
63. Holiday enough, and the ears are still ears.
64. We offered red felt. The cat offered a slow exit.

65. The joke is the refusal, told with affection.
66. A hat-free face is a finished portrait.
67. The pom-pom stayed in the box, which the cat considers a win.
68. Not today, hat.
69. The ears remain unadvertised and perfect.
70. You can be festive beside a cat who has declined the dress code.
71. The photo shows fur, eyes and peace. The caption does not invent a costume.
72. The hat tried. The cat had a prior appointment with the cushion.
73. Celebrate the no.
74. A red hat on a hook is scenery. A cat without it is the subject.
75. We laughed, then left the hat where the cat had voted: elsewhere.
76. The greeting still works: warm room, cool cat, no felt.
77. Refusal, captured kindly, which is the only way to capture it.
78. The picture is ordinary on purpose. Ordinary is the joke's honesty.

Greetings That Do Not Copy Song Lyrics

These wishes are original household sentences. They do not borrow a chorus, a verse or a famous title line.

79. Warm window, cold evening, cat in the middle.
80. Wishing you a quiet room and a soft landing.
81. May your blanket be heavy and your inbox be light.
82. Hello from the sill, where the holiday is a square of light.
83. Peace on the couch, and peace to anyone the cat allows to share it.
84. We are glad you are here, and so is the cat, probably.
85. May the evening be unhurried.
86. From our house to your chair: sit, if the cat allows.
87. Bright lights outside, low lights inside, one cat voting with the low lights.
88. A wish for good company and an empty box with excellent seating.
89. The season fits in a sentence when the cat is the comma.
90. Good wishes, edited by a yawn.
91. May your floor be warm and your guests be calm.
92. A hello with whiskers, sent without a tune.
93. We kept the greeting in our own words, the way a card should.
94. Comfort, a lamp, and the cat who guards both.
95. From the household that answers the door and then pretends it did not.
96. Paws tucked, lights low, see you in the soft part of the day.

Clean Cat Christmas Jokes a Child Can Read

Short enough to say between cookies, with no meanness and no dare to climb or chew. The last line should still make sense to a child.

97. The cat sat by the tree and blinked like a tiny lantern.
98. Why did the cat like the box? Because the box said hello by being empty.
99. The ornament is round. The cat is rounder when asleep.
100. What do you call a cat at a card reading? The guest of honor, currently a loaf.
101. The cat brought a toy to the party and then sat on the toy.
102. Little bell, little cat, big smile from the child telling the joke.
103. Why was the stocking funny? The cat thought it was a tall soft mouse, then decided it was a pillow.
104. The star is up high. The cat is down low. Everybody is in the right place.
105. The cat wrapped the present in a nap.
106. What did the cat give the family? A blink, a box and a very serious face.
107. The bow is red. The cat is not wearing it. The cat is still the star of the chair.
108. Why did the lights make the cat squint? They were bright, and the cat had opinions.
109. This one is clean enough to read between cookies.
110. The cat walked around the presents and chose the people.
111. The cat kept the evening by keeping the chair warm.
112. What is on the tree? Shiny things. What is on the chair? The boss.
113. Meow, and a happy quiet evening.
114. In this story the cat does not climb. The cat waves a tail and stays.
115. Everybody laughs, then everybody lets the cat sleep.
116. The card says love. The cat says nothing, which a child may translate as love.
117. Why did the family smile? The cat sat in the middle of the paper and looked proud.
118. The end of the joke is a pat, if the cat says yes.

Shelter Holiday Thank-You Lines

Name the gift first: blankets, food, hours, a calm visit. The pun can clap from the side. The cats are the reason for the thanks, not the target of it.

119. Thank you for the blankets. A shelter cat can turn a blanket into a holiday.
120. Your gift bought food and time. The thank-you is from the people who saw it arrive.
121. Volunteers, this note is yours: folded towels and calm hands.
122. A holiday post can be grateful without making a joke out of a hard story.
123. The pun stays light. The thanks stay first.
124. You brought comfort for cats who needed a soft place. That is the whole point.
125. Donors and foster friends, the evening is warmer because you helped.
126. With thanks, from the room where the cats are resting.
127. Name the gift plainly, then add one gentle joke if you still want one.

128. The cats are not punchlines. They are why the thank-you exists.
129. A bow on a supply box is festive. The list of supplies is the message.
130. Thank you for reading the whole post before you shared it.
131. The shelter's holiday is shifts and kindness. The joke can clap from the side.
132. Warm beds, warm thanks.
133. If a line teases a cat for needing help, it does not belong on the sign.
134. A visit, a gift, a share: three ways to answer a thank-you.
135. The photo can be a cat asleep, because rest is a good report.
136. We may joke about boxes. We do not joke about losing a home.
137. End with the way to help, in one clear sentence.
138. From the people who fold, scoop and sit quietly: thank you.

Captions for a Cat Who Is Simply Asleep

The photo shows a dog and a cat resting together in ordinary light, with no costume. These lines also fit a cat who is simply asleep. They do not invent a hat.

139. The cat is asleep, which is a complete holiday plan.
140. Festive hours are closed for a nap.
141. No hat, no pose, just a comma-shaped cat.
142. The lights can blink. The cat will not.
143. A sleeping caption does not need props. It needs quiet words.
144. Do not disturb the season. The season is the cat.
145. One paw over the eyes, like a tiny curtain.
146. The card can wait. The nap cannot.
147. Write asleep if that is what you see. Do not write costume if you do not see one.
148. The room is the decoration. The cat is the centerpiece by doing nothing.
149. The cat may be dreaming of a smaller tree and a larger cushion.
150. Snore level: polite. Holiday level: sufficient.
151. A friend may be resting nearby. The caption can include both without inventing a party.
152. Closed eyes are the opposite of a performance, and that is the charm.
153. Merry, whispered, for a sleeper.
154. The tree can work in the background. The cat is working at resting.
155. If the cat wakes, the joke can retire. Until then, tiptoe in the sentence.
156. A loaf, a blanket, a finished greeting.
157. Still asleep, still the point of the photo.
158. No ribbon, no dare, no noise. Just a cat who found the afternoon comfortable.
159. Sign the card after the nap, or sign it now and let the cat co-sign by not moving.

Frequently asked questions

What is a cat Christmas pun for a present from the family cat?

The honest gift is the box, the slow blink or one perfect hair on the sweater you have to wear. 'The cat's present is the box. The thing you wrapped is now a footnote.' A present-from-the-cat line works when the cat is the giver of attention, not a shopper, and the joke stays fond.

How can I write a Christmas-tree cat joke without encouraging climbing or chewing?

Put the cat on the chair, the rug or the basket, and let the tree stay scenery. Use beside the tree, not up the tree, and do not dare a child to try the climb. Tinsel and ribbon are poor playthings. If a cat has already chewed a decoration, ask a veterinarian instead of turning that into the joke.

Which cat Christmas puns fit a small ornament?

Short ones. 'One small ornament, one large opinion.' A little bauble, a tiny bell or a painted fish can be admired in the line without becoming a chase. If the ornament dangles, the joke should say look, not go on and bat it.

What is a gentle festive caption for a cat refusing a Santa hat?

The hat is on the chair, and the cat is on the principle of the thing. If the photo shows no hat, do not invent a costume in the caption. Refusal can be funny when it is told with affection and the cat is allowed to win, and festive can simply mean a warm room and an undecorated head.

How can I adapt a Christmas greeting into a cat pun without copying song lyrics?

Keep the wish and replace the melody with something a cat actually does: a sill, a blink, a loaf, a lamp. 'Warm window, cold evening, cat in the middle.' Write your own sentence instead of borrowing a chorus, a verse or a famous title line. A card sounds better in a household's own words.

What is a clean cat Christmas joke a child can read aloud?

A clean one to read aloud: why did the cat like the box? Because the box said hello by being empty. It has no meanness, no scare and no instruction to climb or chew, so a child can say it between cookies and then let the cat sleep. If the last line needs a wink meant only for adults, it is the wrong joke for reading aloud.

Which cat Christmas lines suit a shelter's holiday thank-you post?

Lines that thank people for blankets, food, hours and calm hands, with the practical gift named before any pun. 'Warm beds, warm thanks.' The cats are the reason for the note, not the target of it. Skip jokes about losing a home, and end with one clear way to help.

How can I make a cat Christmas caption work when the cat is simply asleep?

Say that the cat is asleep, or resting, if that is what the photo shows, and skip props you cannot see. 'Festive hours are closed for a nap.' A quiet line about a loaf, a tucked paw or a tree in the background is enough. Do not claim a hat or a costume when the picture is only a sleeper, or a sleeper with a friend nearby.