HOME NOTES MAGAZINE

168 Cat Halloween Puns for Pumpkin Night (2026)

168 original puns, ready to copy

A cat Halloween pun can sit under a pumpkin, on a party invitation, or beside a cat who has declined every costume in the bag. Black-cat lines here skip the old myth, witch jokes stay friendly for children, and spooky punchlines never joke about cruelty.

Quick summary

Cat Halloween puns cover pumpkin captions, friendly witch jokes, and cats who skip the costume. Black-cat lines leave the unlucky myth alone. Meow can be a sound effect, and shelter posts get a plain thank-you. Spooky jokes stay kind, with no cruel punchline.

- Black-cat lines that skip the unlucky myth.
- Pumpkin-carving captions and gentle witch jokes for children.
- Captions for a cat who will not wear a costume.
- Meow as a sound effect, shelter thank-yous, and kind spooky jokes.

Read the full guide with search, filters and FAQs: https://homespunsecret.com/cat-halloween-puns
Last updated 2026-11-13. Free for personal and classroom use. Please link back if you share.

Contents

1. Black-Cat Puns That Skip the Unlucky Myth (22)
2. Pumpkin-Carving Captions (20)
3. Friendly Witch's-Cat Jokes for Children (20)
4. Captions When the Cat Will Not Wear a Costume (22)
5. Meow as a Halloween Sound Effect (18)
6. October Thank-You Lines for a Shelter Post (20)
7. Cat Lines for a Trick-or-Treat Invitation (22)
8. Spooky Jokes That Never Joke About Cruelty (24)

Black-Cat Puns That Skip the Unlucky Myth

This close-up is a fluffy face, not a costume, and it is not here to illustrate a myth. A black cat in a caption is a cat with a name, a porch, and a dinner time.

1. A black cat is a cat. The rest is a story we can leave on the shelf.
2. Midnight fur, morning stretch, ordinary magic.
3. The black cat on the step is waiting for dinner, not for a legend.
4. Glossy coat, bright eyes, zero interest in anybody's superstition.
5. Lucky is a word for finding them. The cat did not audition for a myth.
6. Caption: dressed in black because that is the fur, not a costume.
7. A black cat in a garden is a garden cat. The pumpkins are the seasonal part.
8. They cross the path because the path goes to the food dish.
9. No rumor, no label, just a cat who likes the warm porch.
10. Halloween can borrow the color. It does not get to borrow a mean story.
11. The black cat blinked. The only spell was patience.
12. Soft paw, dark coat, a very normal nap.
13. If you need a caption, try: friend-shaped, night-colored.
14. They are not an omen. They are excellent at ignoring the party.
15. A black cat photo needs one fact: this is a pet, loved on purpose.
16. Skip the old tale. Write their name.
17. Dark fur shows the dust in a sunbeam. That is the whole special effect.
18. The old story can stay in a book. The cat would like the box instead.
19. October looks good on a black coat. So does April.
20. A porch, a cat, a pumpkin. Nobody here is a warning.
21. Write hello, not omen.
22. Black cats belong in family photos, adoption posts, and sunny naps.

Pumpkin-Carving Captions

The hero picture already has pumpkins in a garden. These captions are for the kitchen table, the seeds, and the cat who thinks the lid is a chair. The rest of the year has its own cat puns for captions, thank-you notes and knock-knock jokes.

23. The pumpkin is carved. The cat is supervising the seeds.
24. Caption: one jack-o'-lantern, one unimpressed critic.
25. We carved a smile. The cat preferred the scoop.
26. Pumpkin night, cat included, seeds on the newspaper.
27. The best seat is the lid. The cat found it first.
28. Orange glow, whisker shadow, a quiet kitchen.
29. Caption for the carving table: helpers have paws and opinions.
30. The pumpkin grins. The cat remains undecided.
31. Seeds for roasting, lap for later.

32. A small cat, a large pumpkin, a fair fight for attention.
33. We kept the carving friendly: triangles, a smile, no scary face.
34. The cat walked through the pumpkin photo and improved it.
35. Caption: October still life, with a tail in the frame.
36. Pumpkin pulp on a paw is a seasonal craft.
37. The candle is pretend. The cat's interest is real.
38. Two pumpkins and a cat who thinks both are chairs.
39. Carving caption: we made a face. The cat made the evening.
40. The stem is a handle. The cat disagrees and sits anyway.
41. A family pumpkin, a family cat, a shared newspaper.
42. Write under the photo: seeds, smiles, and one supervisor.

Friendly Witch's-Cat Jokes for Children

The kitten in this photo is not wearing a costume. The jokes beside it stay pretend, polite, and easy to read at a kids' party. No fright, no mean spell.

43. The witch's cat keeps the storybook closed and the nap schedule open.
44. What does a friendly witch's cat ride? A broom is optional. A sunny cushion is not.
45. The pointed hat is for the person. The cat contributes the stare.
46. A kid-friendly joke: the cat helps by sitting in the chalk circle and purring.
47. Why did the little witch share her snack? Her cat reminded her that friends go first.
48. The pot on the play stove holds warm cider for people. The cat has a plain water bowl.
49. Friendly spell: please, thank you, and an extra chin scratch.
50. The cat's job at the pretend party is to remind everyone to be kind.
51. What did the witch's cat say at story time? Meow is just hello with a costume voice.
52. No scary brew. Just a paper moon and a cat who wants the ribbon only if it feels loose.
53. The little witch and her cat practice waving, not worrying.
54. A broom can be a hobby horse. The cat can be the audience.
55. Why was the witch's cat invited to story time? It already knew how to sit quietly.
56. The cape is soft. The cat is softer. The joke is gentle.
57. Kids' caption: our pretend witch has a real cat and a very real bedtime.
58. The spell for a good party is apple slices for children and calm voices for cats.
59. What do you call a witch's cat who shares toys? A good friend in a paper hat.
60. The hat tips. The cat does not. Everyone laughs anyway.
61. A friendly familiar brings the crayon, then sits on the drawing.
62. Bedtime joke: the witch, the cat, and one more story.

Captions When the Cat Will Not Wear a Costume

This photo is a white cat on a sunny walk, ordinary pavement and no costume. Use it when the cat has opted out of hats, capes, and elastic.

63. The costume stayed in the bag. The cat stayed magnificent.

64. Caption: Halloween, uncostumed, fully committed to the windowsill.
65. We offered a tiny hat. We received a slow exit.
66. No cape, no clip-on ears, no debate.
67. The cat will attend as itself, which is already a look.
68. Costume plan, revised: one pumpkin in the photo, zero elastic on the cat.
69. They sniffed the bow and voted no with their feet.
70. Caption for the opt-out: present, fluffy, and not participating in accessories.
71. A cat in ordinary fur is dressed for the evening.
72. We respect a no. The pumpkin can wear the face.
73. Halloween caption: the cat declined the costume and accepted the lap.
74. The hat fit for one second. The story will say it was a blink.
75. Plain collar, plain cat, excellent October.
76. They walked their usual path. That was the whole parade.
77. If the costume is a maybe, the answer is already no.
78. Caption: seasonal background, everyday cat.
79. We took the photo before anyone mentioned a bow.
80. The cat's outfit is a sun patch and a serious expression.
81. No costume required for a good October caption.
82. They supervised the decorations from a costume-free distance.
83. Write this when the hat fails: still our favorite, still unbothered.
84. The sidewalk did not need a costume. Neither did the cat.

Meow as a Halloween Sound Effect

A meow can replace a cartoon thunderclap. It is still just the cat, and the joke should stay small enough for a toddler.

85. Meow is the doorbell of October.
86. The wind went whoosh. The cat went meow. The pumpkin stayed put.
87. Sound effect for the party: meow, then a treat-bag rustle, then meow again.
88. A meow at the door counts as a friendly ghost noise.
89. Caption: creak, meow, giggle. That is the soundtrack.
90. Meow-ooo, said the cat, auditioning for the wind.
91. The most reliable sound in our house is a meow near the food dish.
92. Use meow where a cartoon would use a thunderclap. The cat prefers it.
93. Knock, knock. Meow. Who is there? The cat, who lives here.
94. A Halloween meow is just a regular meow near a pumpkin.
95. The invitation says listen for the meow. That means we are home.
96. Meow, pause, meow. It is a two-beat song for toddlers.
97. The cat provided the sound effect. The children provided the laugh.
98. Write meow in the speech bubble. Skip the scream.

99. One meow turned the hallway into a play.
100. The pumpkin is silent. The cat is not.
101. Meow is our house's official October echo.
102. Soft meow, soft night, soft joke.

October Thank-You Lines for a Shelter Post

A shelter post can wear a pumpkin border and still be about a real cat. Thank the people who write names instead of spooky labels.

103. October thank-you: you shared a shelter cat's photo with care.
104. A black cat on an adoption post is a cat who needs a porch, not a myth.
105. Thank you for fostering through the costume season.
106. This October, a quiet room still holds a whole personality.
107. Grateful for volunteers who write names, not spooky labels.
108. A shelter post can be festive and still be about a real cat.
109. Thank you for the extra blanket when the nights turned cool.
110. You helped a cat be seen in October without a scary caption.
111. Adoption season can wear orange. The cats wear their own fur.
112. Thank you for telling the truth: this cat is friendly, and the myth is not the story.
113. A pumpkin border on a shelter post is enough decoration.
114. You walked the shy cat past the party noise. Thank you.
115. October gratitude: time, photos, and a calm voice.
116. The best seasonal post is a cat's name and a way to help.
117. Thank you for keeping costumes off cats who did not ask.
118. A foster's couch in October is a launchpad, not a haunted house.
119. You shared the link. Someone else may share a home.
120. Thank you for setting the spice jokes aside and writing a clear bio.
121. Shelter cats do not need a fright. They need a Tuesday.
122. With thanks, from the October shift and every cat on it.

Cat Lines for a Trick-or-Treat Invitation

An invitation can be festive and still protect the cat: indoor voice, people-only candy, and no costume that pinches. If a costume is in doubt, ask a veterinarian.

123. Come trick-or-treat. The cat will supervise from the stairs.
124. Invitation: porch light on, cat inside, candy for people only.
125. The cat requests indoor voices and outdoor shoes.
126. You are invited. The pumpkin is ready. The cat is undecided.
127. Please knock softly. Our greeter has whiskers and a strict nap.
128. Candy for children. Admiration for the cat. Those are the party rules.
129. Join us on the steps. Leave scratchy costume pieces outside.
130. The invitation is friendly. The cat's cameo is not guaranteed.

131. Trick-or-treat stop: look for the orange porch and the cat in the window.
132. Bring a bag for candy. Bring quiet hands if you hope to glimpse the cat.
133. Our party map: doorbell, bowl, cat on the banister.
134. You are invited to a pumpkin night that stays gentle.
135. The cat will not be handing out candy. The humans have thumbs.
136. Come by before the cat claims the doormat.
137. Invitation line: meow means we heard you.
138. Friendly costumes welcome. Scary masks can wait on the porch.
139. The cat asked us to say the water bowl is not a candy cauldron.
140. Join the block walk. Wave at the window cat on your way past.
141. A short invite: light on, joke mild, cat optional.
142. Please no loud bangs. Our cat is part of the household, not a prop.
143. Trick-or-treat card: we saved you a smile and a people-only treat.
144. The last line of the invite is a paw print, drawn by a person and approved by a cat.

Spooky Jokes That Never Joke About Cruelty

Spooky can mean a long shadow and a cotton cobweb. It cannot mean a joke about hurting, scaring, or pinching a cat. Costume questions belong with a veterinarian, not with a punchline.

145. How do you make a cat joke spooky without being mean? Add a pumpkin, not a poke.
146. The ghost in our photo is a sheet on a chair. The cat is uninvolved and comfortable.
147. A spooky punchline should end in a giggle, not a flinch.
148. Why did the cat sit by the jack-o'-lantern? It liked the warm light, and the light liked the company.
149. The only thing we pounce is a toy mouse, and even that is optional.
150. Spooky caption: shadows are long, and the cat is fine.
151. A Halloween joke can creak. It should never pinch, tease a fear, or treat a pet as a prop.
152. What is the gentlest haunt? A cat under a table, perfectly safe, mildly mysterious.
153. We left out every joke about tossing or startling a cat. This one is about sharing a blanket.
154. The pumpkin face is smiling. The cat is blinking. Nobody is in trouble.
155. Why did the costume stay off? Because comfort is the better punchline.
156. A spooky meow from the hallway is still just our cat, and we answer kindly.
157. Joke rule: if the cat would hate it, it does not go on the card.
158. The cobweb is cotton. The cat inspected it and filed no complaint.
159. What did the kind ghost say to the cat? After you.
160. Spooky, not sharp: the night is dark, and the water bowl is full.
161. We do not joke about scaring pets or costumes that pinch. Ask a veterinarian if a costume is even a good idea.
162. The punchline is a pumpkin seed on a nose, brushed off with care.
163. A black-cat joke that stays kind: they showed up, they stayed, they napped.
164. Why was the storybook house quiet? The cat requested a softer story.

165. Cheerful cat, paper decorations, and nobody pretending fear is a toy.
166. The joke ends when everyone, including the pet, is still comfortable.
167. October can be orange and silly. It does not need a mean streak.
168. Final spooky line: boo is just a sound. The cat prefers meow, and we listen.

Frequently asked questions

What is a black-cat Halloween pun that avoids unlucky-cat stereotypes?

Call the cat a cat: dark fur, a porch, a name, and a dinner time. A line such as write hello, not omen, refuses the old story without repeating it as a joke. The laugh, if there is one, comes from the cat ignoring the party, not from a curse.

Which cat Halloween puns fit a pumpkin-carving caption?

Use the seeds, the lid, and the cat who thinks both pumpkins are chairs. Short lines work under a photo: one jack-o'-lantern, one unimpressed critic. Keep the carved face friendly if children will see the picture.

How can I write a witch's-cat joke that is friendly for young children?

Make the witch pretend, the hat optional, and the cat in charge of naps and kindness. A broom can be a hobby horse, and the drink in the play pot can be cider for people with water for the cat. Skip scary threats. Bedtime can be the punchline.

What is a cat Halloween caption when the cat will not wear a costume?

Say the costume stayed in the bag and the cat stayed magnificent. A sunny walk, a windowsill, or a plain collar is a complete October photo. Respecting a no is funnier, and kinder, than wrestling a hat into the frame.

How can a meow become a Halloween sound-effect joke?

Put meow where a cartoon would put a thunderclap, then admit it is still a regular meow near a pumpkin. A two-beat meow, pause, meow is enough of a song for a toddler. The door joke writes itself: the cat who meows already lives there.

What is a cat Halloween pun for a shelter's October adoption post?

Thank the people who share a clear photo and a real name, and skip spooky labels. A black cat on that post needs a porch, not a myth. A pumpkin border is plenty of decoration if the caption tells someone how to help.

Which cat Halloween lines work on trick-or-treat party invitations?

Invite people to a porch light, a mild joke, and a cat who may or may not appear. Say that candy is for people and that loud bangs can stay outside. A paw print drawn by a human is a friendly last line.

How do I make a spooky cat joke funny without joking about cruelty?

Use cotton cobwebs, paper pumpkins, and a cat who is safe under the table. If the joke needs someone to flinch, pinch, or be scared on purpose, it does not belong on the card. When a costume comes up, ask a veterinarian before you decide it is a good idea.