

Funny Curling Jokes 2026 (Updated): 100 Lines That Actually Land

100 original puns, ready to copy

Curling is packed with words that already sound like jokes. A skip is a captain and a hop. The house is a home and a scoring target. The hammer is a tool and the last stone of an end. These 100 funny curling jokes move through sweeping, stones, the button, and the hog line with clean one-liners for bonspiels, captions, team chats, and Olympics watch parties. If ice sports are your whole winter mood, our hockey puns keep you on the sheet.

Quick summary

Curling is a team ice sport where players slide granite stones toward a circular target called the house while teammates sweep to influence the path. The button is the tiny center circle, and the hammer is the last-stone advantage. Funny curling jokes play on that vocabulary for clubs, captions, and casual fans.

- 100 original curling jokes across 10 sections.
- Coverage for skips, sweepers, the house, the hammer, Canadians, and captions.
- Clean lines for clubs, classrooms, and Olympic watch parties.
- Written from real sheet vocabulary, not generic winter filler.
- Updated 2026-10-18. Copy any line for the team chat.

*Read the full guide with search, filters and FAQs: <https://homespunsecret.com/funny-curling-jokes>
Last updated 2026-10-18. Free for personal and classroom use. Please link back if you share.*

Contents

1. Funny Curling Jokes: Icebreakers That Actually Land (10)
2. Short Funny Curling Puns (10)
3. Curling Dad Jokes That'll Sweep You Off Your Feet (10)
4. Funny Curling Jokes About the House and the Button (10)
5. Canadian Curling Jokes (10)
6. Curling Jokes About the Stone, the Rock, and the Hammer (10)
7. Funny Curling Jokes for the Skip and Sweepers (10)
8. Curling Captions for Instagram (10)
9. Clever Curling Sport Puns (10)
10. Curly Hair Puns With a Curling Twist (10)

Funny Curling Jokes: Icebreakers That Actually Land

These openers cover the basics. These funny curling jokes cover the whole sheet: from the hog line to the house, and they are perfect for bonspiels, watch parties, and breaking the ice at your local curling club. Every line is clean, quick, and ready to sweep the room.

1. My curling strategy is simple: aim for the house, land in the parking lot.
2. Curling is the only sport where yelling "Hurry!" at someone with a broom is totally normal.
3. I told my skip I needed space: so he put me at lead.
4. Sweeping is just vacuuming, but make it Olympic.
5. My stone didn't curl, it just gave up and went straight home.
6. The hog line and I have an understanding: I never cross it, and it never forgives me.
7. Curling: chess on ice, if chess pieces weighed 44 pounds.
8. I joined a curling club for the exercise; I stayed for the post-game snacks.
9. My delivery is so slow, the ice refroze before my stone arrived.
10. The button is tiny, and my aim is tinier.

Short Funny Curling Puns

Short, sharp, and sheet-ready. These funny curling puns are built for captions, texts, and team chats, proof that the best curling puns land in under ten words.

11. Rock on!
12. Let's sweep things under the ice.
13. I'm on thin ice and proud of it.
14. That shot was un-brrr-lievable.
15. Keep calm and curl on.
16. You're the skip to my heart.
17. Don't take it for granite.
18. Slide into first place: the draw master has arrived.
19. This end's for you.
20. I'm floored, well, iced.

Curling Dad Jokes That'll Sweep You Off Your Feet

Dad jokes and curling were made for each other, both involve questionable aim and total confidence. These curling dad jokes are clean enough for the whole rink, from the lead to the skip.

21. Why did the curler bring a broom to dinner? He heard the floor needed sweeping.
22. I asked the skip for directions, he just pointed at the house and said "weight it out."
23. My dad's curling advice is simple: always follow through, and always sweep up after yourself.
24. What do you call a lazy sweeper? A dust bunny on ice.
25. The stone told the broom, "You complete my glide path."
26. Why don't curlers ever get lost? They always find the house.
27. Dad's pre-game meal? Cold cuts, served on ice, obviously.
28. I told my kids curling is easy: then the hog line humbled me.

29. What did the skip say at the family reunion? "Everybody huddle up, this is a team meeting."
30. My dad calls his final shot "the hammer": and his final snack "the nail in the coffin of my diet."

Funny Curling Jokes About the House and the Button

The house is the big target of painted rings, and the button is its tiny bullseye center. These funny curling jokes celebrate the two most famous circles in winter sports: and every stone that dreams of landing inside them.

31. The house has four rings and zero mortgages, best real estate on ice.
32. I aimed for the button and hit the backboards, geography was never my end.
33. The button is the size of a coin, and my target is the size of a wish.
34. Living rent-free in the house? Just ask my opponent's stones, they never leave.
35. My stone parked itself on the button and refused to move, it's a resident now.
36. The house: where rocks go to feel important.
37. I painted the button red so my stones could find it, they still can't.
38. Forget beachfront property, give me house-front granite.
39. The button called, it wants its personal space back.
40. My draw weight was perfect; the button just moved. Probably.

Canadian Curling Jokes

Canada is curling's heartland, home to more curling clubs than anywhere on Earth and a pipeline of Winter Olympics heroes. These Canadian curling jokes salute Team Canada, the true north, and the polite art of the perfect draw. Another northern pastime with excellent wordplay: our skiing puns.

41. In Canada, curling isn't a sport, it's a season.
42. Team Canada doesn't sweep the ice: the ice sweeps itself out of respect.
43. Canadian winters are so long, the stones started filing for residency.
44. Why did the Canadian curler apologize to the stone? It was the polite thing to do, sorry!
45. Double-double in one hand, hammer in the other, that's a Canadian power play.
46. Team Canada's secret weapon? Saying "eh" so the stone feels at home.
47. In Canada, the hog line is more respected than most speed limits.
48. A Canadian skip never yells "Hard!", he says "Hard, please and thank you."
49. Curling was invented in Scotland, perfected in Canada, and apologized for in both.
50. My Canadian friend's idea of a heated rivalry? Two rinks sharing one thermos.

Curling Jokes About the Stone, the Rock, and the Hammer

The stone: also called the rock, is 44 pounds of Scottish granite, and the hammer is the last-stone advantage every team wants. These curling jokes dig into the gear that makes the roaring game roar. (For more ice-sport laughs, see our hockey puns.).

51. My rock has commitment issues, it won't stay in the house.
52. The hammer isn't a tool, it's a lifestyle: and mine's purely decorative.
53. Granite: nature's way of saying this sport is set in stone.
54. My stone and I had a falling out, it was a takeout, technically.
55. Why did the rock go to therapy? Too much pressure at the button.

56. The hammer went to the gym once, now it thinks it's Thor.
57. I named my stone Rocky, it had a great run until the fifth end.
58. Stones are like opinions, everybody's got two, and the skip ignores both.
59. My rock doesn't curl, it just wanders off and finds itself.
60. Having the hammer and missing anyway, now that's a swing and a miss.

Funny Curling Jokes for the Skip and Sweepers

The skip is the team's captain and chief strategist; the sweepers are the muscle that steers every stone. These funny curling jokes honor the loudest partnership in sports, one calls the shots, the others sweep like the end depends on it.

61. The skip calls the shots: the sweepers call in sick the next day.
62. Sweeping: the only job where "harder!" is encouragement and "whoa!" is a compliment.
63. My skip's strategy board has one play: "You got this."
64. Sweepers don't need gym memberships, they have eight ends of cardio.
65. The skip pointed at the broom; the broom pointed at the skip. Teamwork.
66. Why did the sweeper get promoted? Outstanding performance under pressure: and under stones.
67. A skip's favorite phrase: "Trust me." A sweeper's favorite phrase, "My arms."
68. I sweep so hard the ice files a noise complaint.
69. The skip sees the future, it's called reading the ice, and it's mostly guessing.
70. Behind every great skip is a team of sweepers wondering why they skipped leg day.

Curling Captions for Instagram

Need a caption for your rink pics? These curling captions pair perfectly with action shots, team selfies, and slow-motion sweeping videos. Tag your curling club and let the likes slide in.

71. Swept off my feet.
72. On the rocks. Literally.
73. Ice, ice, baby, curling edition.
74. Hammer time.
75. Living that house life.
76. Sweep dreams are made of ice.
77. Stone cold stunner.
78. Current mood: draw weight.
79. Keep your friends close and your hammer closer.
80. Sheet happens: then you sweep.

Clever Curling Sport Puns

For the tacticians who know their takeouts from their draws. These clever curling sport puns cover ends, guards, freezes, and the beautiful science of the slide. If wordplay is your sport, our wrestling puns bring the same energy to the mat. Blades without brooms live on our skating puns page.

81. Curling: the thinking person's ice sport, and the sweeping person's workout.
82. An end is just an inning that went to finishing school.

- 83. The free guard zone: where stones get diplomatic immunity.
- 84. My strategy is pure physics, unfortunately, it's the wrong physics.
- 85. A freeze is just a stone giving another stone a hug. A very cold, competitive hug.
- 86. The scoreboard said zero: the fun board said ten.
- 87. I don't always play the angles: but when I do, I miss them.
- 88. Curling proves you can be elite and carry a broom at the same time.
- 89. A peel is just spring cleaning for the house.
- 90. My takeout game is strong, my draw game is takeout. Wait.

Curly Hair Puns With a Curling Twist

Curling, curly: the wordplay writes itself. These curly hair puns borrow the language of the sheet for anyone whose hair has a mind of its own. No broom required. If you came for wordplay and stayed for precision sports, our golf puns scratch a similar itch.

- 91. My hair has more curl than my stone: and it's not even trying.
- 92. Bad hair day? Just call it a natural curl.
- 93. I told my stylist I wanted "draw weight", now my curls land exactly where they want.
- 94. Curly hair and curling stones: both impossible to control on ice.
- 95. My curls have their own skip, they never listen to me either.
- 96. Sweeping my hair back is the only sweeping I do off the ice.
- 97. The house of curls: where every ringlet scores.
- 98. My morning routine has more ends than a championship game.
- 99. Frizz is just my hair's version of a bad draw.
- 100. Rock your curls, literally, they're heavier than they look.

Frequently asked questions

How much does a curling stone cost?

A single regulation curling stone costs roughly $400 to $600, so a full match set of 16 stones runs $8,000 to $10,000. The price comes from rare, water-resistant Ailsa Craig granite quarried off the coast of Scotland, which is the only stone tough enough for championship play.

What are some common slang terms used in curling?

Common curling slang includes the hammer (last-stone advantage), the skip (team captain), the hog line (the stone must be released before it), the house (the scoring rings), and a bonspiel (a curling tournament). Players also shout "hard" and "whoa" to tell sweepers when to sweep or stop.

What country is curling the most popular in?

Canada is curling's biggest home, with more registered curlers and curling clubs than any other nation. The sport was born in Scotland in the 1500s, but Canada's long winters, small-town rinks, and Olympic heroes turned it into a national pastime. Sweden, Switzerland, and Norway are strong curling nations too.

What do players shout in curling?

Curlers shout "hard" to start sweeping, "whoa" to stop, "hurry" to sweep faster, and "line" or "weight" to judge the stone's path and speed. The skip does most of the calling, guiding sweepers as the stone glides toward the house. It is the sport's own language, echoing through every curling club each winter.

What do you call a curling match?

A curling match is simply called a game, and a full tournament is called a bonspiel. Each game is divided into ends, which work like innings in baseball, usually 8 or 10 per game. Teams alternate stones in every end until one side scores by landing closest to the button.

What do you call a curling team?

A curling team is called a rink. Each rink has four players: the lead, second, third, and skip, and every player throws two stones per end. The skip is the captain, calling the shots and holding the broom as the target, while the other three sweep.

What do you call a shot in curling?

A shot in curling is simply called a shot, though players name each type: a draw slides gently into the house, a takeout knocks an opponent's stone away, and a guard blocks the path. The most famous shot of all is the final one of an end, especially when a team holds the hammer.

Which town is the curling capital of the US?

Bemidji, Minnesota, calls itself the curling capital of the United States. Its 90-year-old curling club has produced multiple Olympians, including members of medal-winning American rinks. The northern Minnesota town also claims Paul Bunyan's birthplace, making it a capital of tall tales as well as tall shots.

Why is the hammer in curling so called?

The hammer is the last stone thrown in an end, and it is called the hammer because it delivers the final, decisive blow, like a hammer striking a nail. Holding the hammer is a big advantage, since the last shot can smash opponents' stones out of the house and claim the end. Now you are armed with 100 funny curling jokes, go sweep your friends off their feet, and may your stones always find the button. Good curling! For more wordplay in the same category, see our skating puns.